

Bio – Short

Jessica T. Carter is a Black American composer, violinist, mezzo-soprano, and educator from Indiana who is swiftly making a name for herself. Described as evocative (Aspire Magazine) and lyrical (Apricity Magazine), Jessica specializes in concert music, film scoring, and musical theatre. Jessica's aim and goal in music composition is to exude the message of hope to all but specifically to marginalized children. Jessica is the two-time scholarship recipient, a grand prize winner for her concert music, and holds four publications including that of ground-breaking research entitled "Concert Music of the Civil Rights Movement."
